“SKILLED have the network and the ability to keep me working on a regular basis”

“During my time at SKILLED I have progressed from being a motor mechanic to being a competent heavy duty diesel fitter,” says Bruce Sherwood of his development over the past two and a half years.

“SKILLED have helped me further my career in the mechanical trades by putting me into a number of positions at a variety of businesses within the mining industry.”

An employee of SKILLED’s branch at Tom Price, a regional mining centre in far northeast Western Australia, Bruce says that variety in his work has made him more versatile, making his job more interesting.

“I work on a range of machines including face shovels, which I find really challenging,” he says. “SKILLED have the network and the ability to keep me working on a regular basis.”

Bruce acknowledges the need to be safety conscious as an employee of SKILLED and to keep an eye out for dangers in his work environment.

“SKILLED take safety policy and their duty of care for their employees really seriously, much more seriously than any other employer I have ever worked for.”
